The Supreme Court Versus the People

The utter worthlessness, under existing conditions, of a civil suit in preventing the injury of trust oppression and punishing the evil of trust combination is shown in the decision of the Supreme Court in the Coal Trust case.

Ten years after the evidence of the existence of the Coal Trust was first furnished to the government of the United States by my attorneys a decision is finally secured from the Supreme Court of the United States confirming our contention that the anthracite railroads had combined to strangle competition and were operating as a combination in defiance of anti-trust law.

For ten years during the progress of this suit the coal roads have been able to maintain this combination, and during all that period to reap the millions of dollars of profit due to the extortion made possible by their illegal monopoly.

At the end of ten years' litigation the attorneys for the people have failed to secure an injunction against the combination itself, whose existence was proved by the Temple Iron Company and the coal purchase contracts, and merely secure from the Supreme Court the termination of these particular agents of monopoly which were offered as evidences of the combination.

There is no restoration of the money stolen from the people through the ten years' continuance of this extortionate monopoly.

There is no penalty imposed upon any of the railroad and financial magnates who created this illegal monopoly and robbed the people by means of it.

Finally, there is no real relief provided for the future, as there is nothing in the decision of the Supreme Court which will prevent the railroads and their coal companies from continuing to operate under some other form of monopolistic combination. They merely will not be allowed to continue to operate under the peculiar instrument of combination known as the "Temple combination," and the peculiar instruments of oppression known as the coal purchase contracts.

The results of this decision therefore in the case of the Coal Trust will be as ineffective for the cause of the people and as advantageous to the cause of trusts as were the decisions in the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases.

The individual component companies of these trusts may still proceed in harmony and in complete agreement to maintain prices to monopolize the market, to oppress the public and to pillage the individual consumer.

This result is already evidenced by the rise in Reading stock, by the gleeful and congratulatory editorials in the trust press and by the expression of complete satisfaction by Mr. Baer, head of the Coal Trust.

In the issue of the New York Sun in which the Coal Trust decision was printed an editorial appears, which says of the decision:

"We think it brings to an end the legal attack upon the anthracite railroad companies that has been in progress so long."

The New York Times says:

"The decision of the Supreme Court in the case of the coal combination shows that the court is still guided by its fortunate discovery of the light of reason."

President Baer says: "I have always been indifferent as to the 65 per cent. contracts. As to the Temple Iron Company decision this is a matter of indifference."

Of all the above mentioned authorities the ticker is the most reliable. It never lies and is seldom deceived.

After the decree of the Supreme Court "dissolving" the Standard Oil Trust the price of the stock rose from $67 1/2 to $1,080 a share. After the decision in the Tobacco cases the price of the Tobacco Trust's stock rose from $465 to $238 for each $100 share.

In the same way and in similar accurate appraisement of actual conditions, the ticker has jumped from 189 1/4 to 168 in Reading Company shares, registering an increase of three million five hundred thousand dollars in the watered stock of that corporation alone. And why not? I have said that the Temple Iron Company, which is so solemnly dissolved by the Supreme Court, was merely one of the instruments by which the coal combination effected some of its illegal purposes.

But the Temple Iron Company was really more than that—or, rather, less than that.

It was created for the definite purpose of strangling a competing railroad line and had performed its function.

That railroad line has long since been eliminated from all possible competition with the trust.

The dissolution, therefore, of the Temple Iron Company without any injunction which affects the general combination of the coal carrying railroads is simply another one of those practical jokes which Mr. Taft's reactionary Supreme Court delights in perpetrating upon the patient public.

Since the Supreme Court decision pretending to dissolve the Standard Oil Trust the price of Standard Oil products has continually increased, and the value of Standard Oil stocks has more than doubled.

The people know this through their every-day experience. The people know that this increase in Standard Oil prices and increase in Standard Oil wealth are due to a certain playful, sleight-of-hand performance on the part of the Supreme Court, which goes through the motions of dissolving a trust without dissolving it, just as Ching Ling Foo, the marvelous Chinese juggler, apparently causes your watch to dissolve into this air and then restores it to your waistcoat pocket, ticking just as regular and faithfully and effectively as ever.

The people know that the combination under which the Standard Oil company now operates and which has been restored to their pocket by the legal jugglery of the Supreme Court is even better than ever, for it is a form of combination which has received the sanction of the law—at least as the law is interpreted by Mr. Taft's reactionary Supreme Court. The people know that the Supreme Court read into the law certain words that Congress had not put into the law and had not intended to have in the law and had even refused to allow in the law, just as Ching Ling Foo takes out of your hat certain hard-boiled eggs and rolls of ribbons and rabbits that you had never put in your hat and never intended to have in your hat and never expected to see come out of your hat; and the audience laughs at your surprise and embarrassment just exactly in the way that the trusts laugh at the people.

Owing to such Supreme Court jugglery in the Standard Oil case, a monopoly more oppressive than ever continues to exist because the monopoly can now be maintained and its acts of oppression and extortion committed without fear of legal consequences; inasmuch as the monopoly in its present form has secured the approval and indorsement of the Supreme Court.

Since the alleged dissolution of the Tobacco Trust the cost of the products of that trust has increased and the value of the securities of that trust has enormously advanced because that monopoly, too, is now operating under a charter from the Supreme Court to plunder the people without fear of punishment.

In the same way nothing has really been done to dissolve the coal combination, and the people may expect no more relief from this latest Coal Trust decision than they secured from the Oil Trust decision and the Tobacco decision and the other humorously styled "Anti-Trust" decisions rendered by Mr. Taft's reactionary Supreme Court.

The price of coal will continue high and will go higher. The combination of the coal roads will continue to be a monopoly and will become constantly a more and more oppressive, extortionate monopoly.

The monopoly will continue to operate in disregard of the interests of the people and in defiance of the will of the people as long as Mr. Taft's reactionary Supreme Court continues to render decisions resulting in the protection of trusts and the perpetration of monopolistic extortion and oppression.

The farcical dissolution of the Temple Iron Company, an institution which has already served its purpose of strangling competition and was no longer of essential value to the Coal Trust, is an evidence of the indifference with which the Supreme Court regards the people's interests and of the contempt with which it regards the people's intelligence.

The attorneys for the people could be content with no such empty and insufficient act as a dissolution of certain agencies of the trust offered as evidence of the combination.

The attorneys for the people asked for genuine relief for the people, for a permanent injunction against the continuance of the oppressive combination which the Temple Iron Company and the coal purchase contracts proved to exist.

It was proven that the coal railroads owned their own mines in the coal district, and that the coal railroads deliberately killed the competition of rival coal mines by means of discriminating transportation charges.

It was shown that the railroads refused to compete with each other in freight rates, so that there was no relief to the coal producers and shippers from universal rate oppression and discrimination.

It was shown that the attempt to build a rival railroad to secure relief from this destructive oppression and discrimination had been killed by the joint efforts of the six Coal Trust railroads united for this purpose in the Temple Iron Company.

It was shown that the railroads, through coal selling companies which they owned, maintained uniform high rates in New York and other distributing centres, were responsible for the high price of coal and prevented any reduction of price through competition.

It was shown that these railroads established the selling price of coal through price circulars issued by every railroad at the same time and with the same provision.

It was proven that these railroads compelled coal to be sold at these fixed prices by blacklisting all coal merchants who did not adhere to these fixed prices.

It was proven that these acts of trust oppression were so criminal in their character that the agents of the coal company who attended the meetings authorizing these acts were registered on the minutes not by their own names, but by numbers, like convicts in the penitentiary.

It was proven that in such ways the coal dealers were controlled and the coal mine owners were forced one by one to sell out to or combine with the coal railroads.

It was proven that the Reading Railroad, by obtaining possession of the coal mines within its territory and then, by absorbing the New Jersey Central, grew to control 63 per cent. of the total of the coal product in the coal mining district. It was shown that these railroads and the coal they controlled, in combination with other coal roads and the coal they controlled, established practically an absolute monopoly of the coal produced, delivered and sold throughout the area covered by these roads.

This whole combination is the thing which is oppressive to the coal consumer, and which exists in defiance of the intentions of Congress as expressed in the Sherman anti-trust law, and yet this whole combination is allowed to remain in existence under the decision of the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court itself recognizes and admits the existence of the combination and the oppressive acts of the combination. The decision says:

"This combination of the defendants through the Temple Iron Company was effective, the New York, Wyoming and Western Railroad was successfully STRANGLED and the monopoly of transportation collectively held by the defendant carrier companies was maintained."

"The combination by means of the Temple Company still exists. It has been and still is an efficient agency for the collective activities of the defendant carriers for the purpose of preventing competition in the transportation and sale of coal in other States."

Yet what is the result?

The existence of a combination to "STRANGLE" competition, and which existed and still exists for the purpose of "STRANGLING" competition, is admitted.

But under the dispensation of the Supreme Court, the combination is not enjoined as the attorneys for the people prayed. The guilty railroad presidents who violated the law to "STRANGLE" competition are not marked out for punishment. Competition is not restored. The Supreme Court merely dissolves the instrument by which the combination was effected and proceeds to render a decision which in the last analysis is a license for the continuance of the monopoly and which protects the privileged special interests and disregards the demands of the people and the rights of the people under the law.

The most unworthy act of Mr. Taft's political career was the packing of the Supreme Court of the United States to make it stand as a bulwark for the privileged interests against the growing progressive movement for equal justice and popular rights.

No institution, however reactionary, can continue permanently to oppose the righteous requirements of the people.

When the people made up their minds to free the slaves no "Dred Scott" Supreme Court was allowed to interfere with their intention. And when the people make up their minds to free themselves from trust oppression no "unreasonable" Supreme Court will be allowed to stand in their way.

Mr. Taft has received a deserved rebuke and a merited punishment in the most ignominious repudiation recorded in American history.

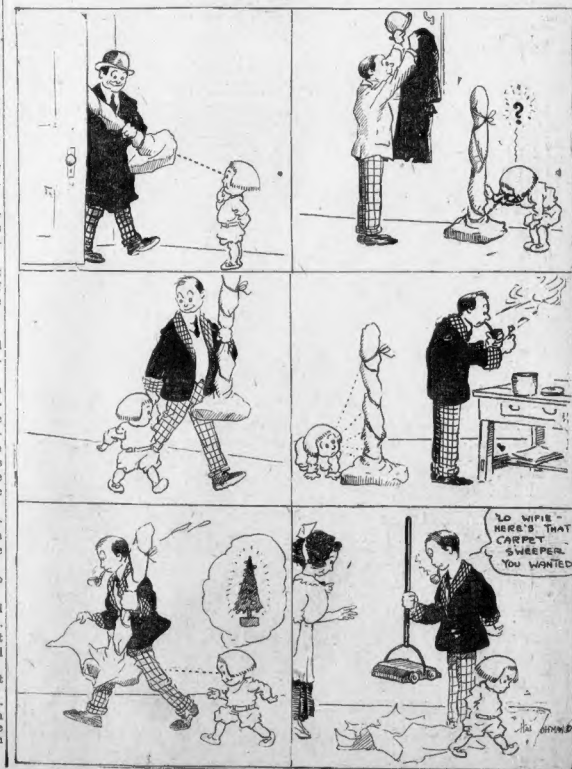

Mr. Taft has been dealt with by the people, but Mr. Taft's reactionary court remains to be dealt with by the people and MUST be dealt with by the people before the people can secure the liberty, the equality, the opportunity, the legal and political rights which are theirs and which under our form of government they should and shall enjoy.

SOUSA'S DAUGHTER NOW THE BRIDE OF HAMILTON ALBERT

Miss Helen Sousa, daughter of John Philip Sousa, the famous band leader, is shown in a recent photograph.

Boston musical circles were interested in the wedding of Miss Helen Sousa, daughter of John Philip Sousa, the famous band leader, to Hamilton Albert, in St. Thomas' Church, New York. The groom, Mr. D. M. Sirois, officiated.

The bride entered the church with her father, who gave her away. Her gown was of white satin, a tulle veil and she carried a large bouquet of white flowers.

The best man was Thomas Marshall, and the bridesmaids were Frederick M. Gross and Arthur S. Osborn. After the wedding reception at the Hotel St. Regis, the couple left on an extended tour through the South.

"Gentleman George" McCusky Is Dead in New York Home

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Police inspector George W. McCusky, who was known familiarly to thousands of New Yorkers by the sobriquet, "Gentleman George," died at his home, No. 235 West Seventeenth street, of pneumonia, after an illness of more than three months.

He began his career as a police officer in 1882 and rose to be lieutenant, captain and captain within five years. When the Honorable Police Board placed Captain Stephen O'Brien in charge of the Detective Bureau, McCusky was reassigned to patrol duty. In 1890 he was made a sergeant again, and soon afterwards he was promoted to a captain, but was ousted by Chief Devery.

In 1903 McCusky came back into favor and was made inspector. He was reduced under Blagden, promoted again, reduced again under Croker, but regained his position under the Gaynor administration.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Don't be afraid, little spug. Spug doesn't mean being an old maid, says Miss Anne Morgan and Miss Elizabeth Marbury explained to a gathering of the Spug capitalists at headquarters, No. 105 West Fourth street.

Three hundred original Spugs and one male Spug, George Barr Baker, a magazine publisher, were at the meeting.

"As you, perhaps know," exclaimed Miss Morgan, "we have mixed spugs—that is, men and women spugs. I know I have both in my squad," she said. "I hope all our capitalists will have the men you know to enroll in the Spug for the Prevention of Unpleasant Circumstances."

It was announced that August Belmont had his 10 cent initiation fee and received a Spug button and enrollment card. Mrs. August Belmont is president of the movement.
